

ART CLASSES.....AUTUMN 2016

Art and the Computer

For many Cezannes I've been looking up to the deep cobalt blue Skypes searching for meaning and understanding of the dynamic oblique with interlocking edges. I heard so much about it in painting classes. I'd like to know if I Kahn re Kindle the emojiis of my art spirit. Do you think Google will know? During the summer I Dali often because I can't get the focal point, or even the vanishing point of all the many groupons of lessons learned.

In the news, I heard about Pokemon go (I think she's a cool Jamaican) who will prod one back into the orbitz of painting. Back Homer I will search for my intense warm and cool brushes. I think they are behind the hard and soft edges of the 140 lb. cold press. I'll bet they are all hidden between the glazes of luminosity. My palette could use 50 shades of gray to stir my excitement. Ah, we are all so transparent!

Now that the Pokemon Go has e-merged to push me forward, I'll share my struggles.....I keep bumping into blank white walls and falling into the depths of deep ultramarine blues of water color. Show me, please, the journey to the golden section of satisfaction so that I will be able to Remembrandt the joys of learning, creating and experimenting with my paintings.

It is Amazon how exciting it is to get back into the art journey with old and new friends. And for those just embarking on the journey, welcome to the world of color, shapes, values, relationships, perspective, negative spaces but very positive reinforcement. The road is safe, encouraging and the Tootsie pops fit right into the thumb drive.

Yelp, where does one go to join in this fun, informative and expanding art journey? There's an APP for that. Yahoo, now I hope I have gotten you excited about the art journey we are about to start.

(and you thought I knew nothing about the computer)
